(WTOC) - The Naval Academy is asking for a pledge to make sure every graduate gets a chance to make a lasting contribution to the nation's military. During the graduation ceremony today, thousands of midshipmen will receive their Bachelor of Science degrees in a ceremony hosted by President Obama. After the ceremony, the Navy sends the graduates to places around the world. For one young Navy man, he's making a commitment to his country. He wants to make sure every Navy graduate gets an opportunity to help serve his country and his fellow service members. Midshipman Ethan Rivers said, "I think that's something that everyone, I think, should have. Just because you're graduating, doesn't mean you're going to have a guaranteed job in the field of engineering," Rivers said. The Navy has many ways for its service members to contribute to the country and fellow service members. He said, "I want to get involved on my side of the coin and become an engineer and to possibly go on to work for the air force or even the army and if I do that, then I'd like to be able to give back to the community and give back to the country that's given me so much." But, Rivers has 2d92ce491b
