EXTRACT UPPERCASE COLORS - Uppercase are used in printing, signage, and for typography, or typography and print. This Uppercase app allows you to easily convert a selection of strings from uppercase to lowercase. You can also define the initial letter as lowercase. HOW IT WORKS: The program is set to analyze a string of text, and then convert upper case letters to lower case. This can be done on a string of text or even images. The program reads the selected area of text, and then converts the text to lowercase. You can then select the output results, and convert to lowercase as well. In addition, you can set the initial letter to be converted to lowercase. You can also define the uppercase text as lowercase. You can set a range of uppercase letters, and a range of lowercase letters. You can also define what you would like to convert as lowercase, and what to convert to uppercase. You can select text to convert, images, or even groups of text. This program makes for a great companion to ConvertCase. It allows you to convert any uppercase to lowercase, or lowercase to uppercase for a selected area of text, group of text, or even images. The program has a GUI for easy use, and can be customized for almost any application, whether it be a spreadsheet, word processing document, etc. The conversion is quite accurate, and it has many options to make sure you get the right results. NOTE This is an update to ConvertCase Pro. If you already have ConvertCase Pro and purchased the update, you will need to uninstall ConvertCase Pro before installing the program. However I want to know who other people who are not part of Stack Overflow are that is associated with Stack Overflow in a wider sense (unofficial mascot, advisor, employer,...). Is there a thread somewhere that lists all these key figures that are not part of Stack Overflow? A: Here's the official list of the "over 25,000 people who've ever been employed at Stack Overflow, Inc." International Trade and Technology Cooperation: Sweden and the EU By Erika Karmo The Swedish-European Union (EU) relationship will be marked by the end of the decade with the negotiations about a new agreement between the EU and the European Free Trade Association (EFTA). A new EU treaty is likely to be in place in 2009 and the existing EFTA agreement with Norway will expire in 2013, so all kinds of proposals for an association agreement between the EU and Sweden will come up
